ABSTRACT

This list of embassies, consulates, and educational and information offices has been compiled for the benefit of teachers of the languages and cultures of peoples of other countries. Section 1 lists each country under the language which is the principal language or one of the official languages of that country. It also contains an alphabetical listing of embassies and consulates of countries where less commonly taught languages are spoken. Section 2 provides a list of additional sources of information on foreign languages and cultures, with annotations describing the specific services available from these organizations. (Author/RL)

INTRODUCTION

This list of embassies, consulates, and educational and information offices has been compiled for the benefit of teachers of the languages and cultures of peoples from other countries.

Section I lists each country under the language which is the principal language or one of the official languages of that country. This format should be helpful in providing information about the different cultures of people who speak a common language. Section I also contains an alphabetical listing of embassies and consulates of countries where less commonly taught languages are spoken.

Section II provides a list of additional sources of information on foreign languages and cultures, with annotations describing the specific services available from these organizations.

The staff members of the embassies, consulates, and other offices are usually very willing to help by giving information and cultural materials to teachers on request. It is suggested that inquiries be made by teachers rather than by individual students, particularly at the embassies and consulates of smaller countries, in order to avoid overburdening their staff.

If we have omitted a country for which you have an interest, please contact the Diplomatic Department of the State Department in Washington, D.C., for information. Telephone: 202-655-4000.
